THE WEEK AHEAD

Another bleak wet week in the Southwest which saw most graziers total 20-3mm for the fortnight. Any oats or cereal crops that have been planted are well and truly established now, which is shaping up to be an above average winter. Prime cattle in all states continue to climb this week, onto competitive grounds that are really making Queensland's bib processors answer a few questions. It is most definitely southern driven, which is keeping everyone honest. The week ending 5th July 2024 slaughter rates went over 140,079 head with Queensland contributing 74,290 head this is more than half.
